

Mysteriously Dressed Woman Found Murdered

Helena, Mont., July 1 —(AP)—The body of a fantastically dressed woman was found along a highway in rugged mountain country south of here. Her head had been battered, evidently with an axe or a hatchet.

Sheriff John Williams said today the body of the unidentified woman, believed dead since June 11, was found Wednesday night in a "bush" of about 50 yards off the highway.

The woman wore men's outer clothing—but several women's undergarments, including 11 slips and six pairs of panties. She also wore a woman's garter belt, men's socks, five men's shirts and overalls. She was about 38 to 40 years old, weighed about 110 pounds and had brownish red hair.

Walking along the street in a small town, a man was startled by a frightening scream from a house. He ran in to investigate and found a frantic mother holding a small child, who had swallowed a bullet. Seizing the child by the neck, he held him up to show him a few shakes, and the child dropped to the floor.

DOROTHY DIX What a Surprise

Dear Miss Dix: If a man and woman love each other why should the man provide for the woman?

Answer: Primarily because if a man loves a woman he desires to provide for her and protect her from all of the hardships of life. A man's civility instinctively exerts itself in a desire to shield his own woman and keep her soft and warm.

Besides this, the husband provides for the wife because for the man to bring home the bacon and for the woman to fry it seems the natural division of labor in family life. Our cave ancestors established the custom when the male foraged for his hairy mate and fetched back the food and clothing for his wife and offspring.

The idea of the man being the breadwinner and the woman the homemaker is based, of course, upon the conception of its being the woman's function to bear and rear the children, and that while she is doing this she has neither the strength nor the time to do anything else, and that theory, in my opinion, still holds good.

Having babies and bringing them up properly is a full woman-sized job, and all that any woman has the health and intelligence to accomplish. Therefore, during this important time in her life when she is making her most important contribution to the world she should be provided for and have her material wants supplied.

Often Necessary to Work Of course, it is often necessary for a woman to work both inside and outside of the home and not only to bear the children, but to provide for them, but this is always a great misfortune. No woman can work to the limit of her strength every day at some job without sacrificing her children of the vitality that she should give them, nor can any mother be away from home all day and give her children the rearing that they should have.

We have satisfactory substitutes for almost everything else under the sun, but human security has not been able to devise a synthetic mother that is as good as the real thing. It takes a mother's patience, a mother's understanding, a mother's nerve, a mother's never-wearying care, a mother's little acts and coerces little sinners into walking the straight road.

Of course, if a married couple have no children and if the woman has a trade or profession by which she can support herself in support herself or if she has a private fortune, that alters the case. Then there is no reason why her husband should provide for her if she is simply able to provide for herself.

But most men like to have their wives dependent upon them, and enjoy providing for them, and I should certainly hesitate a long time before I married a man who is balking at this before marriage.

Dear Miss Dix: A girl, a young college graduate, said to me the other day: "I want to get married some time, but I don't want to have more contacts, to see more of the world. When I marry, and I have a notion I would like to be a minister's wife, I expect my husband to agree with me, sympathize with me, respect me and love me. I suppose he will have to feel superior to my husband." Do you get that? I am all fed up on this female superiority. There is no Mrs. B. yet, but I will never think of marrying a woman who believes in sex superiority. Women are as good as we are. We are as good as they are. How about it?

Answer: It's news to me that women entertain any idea of sex superiority. I thought it was the other way about and that every man thought that he was better and wiser than any woman.

Isn't the deadliest insult you can pay a man to accuse him of being feminine and isn't "sissy" the fight-

No Change in Labor Act Almost Certain

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, July 1 —(AP)—The Taft-Hartley labor act looks certain to stay unchanged for at least another year.

The Truman Democrats had vowed to destroy that act. Things have gone so badly for them they'll consider it a kind of victory now to keep it.

They lost their last hope of killing it yesterday when the senate passed a new labor bill closely resembling the present law.

This was put over by the Republicans and Southern Democrats who, by joining forces, outvoted the Truman Democrats.

The next move is up to the house. There can be no new labor law at all unless both houses approve a bill.

So the Trumanites have these moves open to them:

Their leaders in the house can try to block any labor bill from being voted on at all.

Or, if they couldn't block a vote, they could try to get the house to pass a bill, an anti-T-H bill, completely different from the senate's.

That in itself would prevent any new labor law this session, for simple reason: It wouldn't get past the senate.

(When both houses pass different bills on the same subject, there they compromise their differences and agree on one bill.)

But the Truman Democrats in the house might lose control there, as they did in the senate, to Republicans and Southern Democrats.

That happened when the house took up a labor bill earlier this year—and it very nearly passed one much like Taft-Hartley.

Memphis Has First Death From Polio

Memphis, July 1 —(AP)—Memphis' first polio death of the year was recorded at isolation hospital today. The victim was Mrs. Frances Park, 20, mother of a month-old child. She had been under respiratory treatment since being admitted Sunday.

Dig at Buddy Brought on Slaying

Ranoke, Va., July 1 —(UP)—Lee Goode Scott, his voice quivering with emotion, told a jury at his murder trial today that he fought a savage battle in a church parish house with a blond high school beauty, choking her until "she didn't move."

He said "something swept over me" when she made a slurring remark about his best boy friend.

Scott denied that he tried to choke his victim. But as she fought like an animal for her life, he held on, and on, and on.

"When I let go, she didn't move," he said.

His composure gone now after three days of poker-faced calm, Scott spoke to a 12-man jury in Hastings (Municipal) court in a voice that quavered.

Fighting to hold back sobs, the handsome youth who was described as a model in his community, blurted:

"I wouldn't have hurt her for the world. She was a mighty fine girl. I wouldn't have hurt her."

The Commonwealth of Virginia, which has completed its case charged that Scott beat beautiful Dana Marie Weaver, 16, with a pop bottle and strangled her in an act of "willful and premeditated murder."

Defense Counsel T. Warren Messick hoped to convince the jury that Scott killed the girl during a fit of anger that brought on partial amnesia. Messick has tried with- out luck to persuade the court to strike out murder testimony and keep the case on the lesser level of involuntary manslaughter.

Every person in the tiny courtroom strained forward to catch Scott's words as he told how Dana Marie died in a tragic death in the second story parish house kitchen at Christ Episcopal church Sunday, May 8.

Scott said the girl "swung at me, clawing and kicking." The outfit was arrested on a telephone tip that he was noticed to bear scratches about the face, neck and hands.

"I had to hold her," Scott said in a voice strained by emotion. During the furious struggle that left blood spattered on the floor and walls of the kitchen and an outer room, Scott said "I held her some more. . . and when I let go, she didn't move."

PRODUCTIVE HEIGHTS—Everybody thought that as soon as the war was over U. S. production would reach unprecedented heights. But it just didn't work out that way. This newschart shows when the postwar production peak of homes, automobiles, household appliances and steel was reached. Extremely heavy production of household items has substantially increased the U. S. standard of living, but production of homes and autos is lagging and has not come up to wartime predictions. Surpassing even their war mark, shipments of steel rose to record heights. The comparatively late peaks for cars and steel are the result of widespread strikes and shortages in those industries in 1946. (Data from the American Iron and Steel Institute.)

Demos Await Instructions on Labor Bill

Washington, July 1 —(AP)—House Democratic leaders today awaited word from President Truman on what to do about the wreckage of the administration's bill to repeal the Taft-Hartley law.

The senate completed demolition of that bill yesterday. Then it passed a substitute by Senator Taft (R-Ohio) which contains the basic provisions of the present labor law. The vote was 41 to 42.

That action, by a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats, blasted high and wide the 1949 hopes of Taft-Hartley repeal advocates. It probably means the T-H measure still will be on the books—and a top campaign issue again—when the 1950 congressional elections roll around.

The senate vote scarcely was tabulated when Mr. Truman told his news conference: The fight is to continue as hard as I can make it.

Two months ago the house fought the first round of the Taft-Hartley battle, and it ended in a deadlock. The house fired the administration's repeal back to its labor committee after carrying within a hair's breadth of passing another measure to keep most of the Taft-Hartley act.

Since then the house committee has taken no action. Now it has before it Taft's senate-approved bill which would make 22 changes in the present law, but retain the essential provisions.

Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) told reporters he doesn't know yet what the house will do. He and other want to get Mr. Truman's views Democratic leaders indicated they on the matter.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the party's chief in the senate, said he is standing by his prediction that Mr. Truman will veto the Taft bill if it ever goes to him.

Mr. Truman declined to say whether he would veto the Taft measure.

Asked whether he would try to defeat Taft's legislation next year, Mr. Truman replied he never had undertaken to defeat the Ohioan. He had no comment on Taft's campaign, or on the re-election prospects of other senators who voted with Taft.

In the house, Rep. Burke (D-Ohio) and Jacobus (D-Ill.), both members of the labor committee, said there is strong sentiment in that group to keep labor legislation on the shelf and take the issue to the people in next year's elections. Burke and Jacobus added, however, they are against that. They want a house showdown at this session.

Clorox Being Used as a Peach Spray
One of the highlights of today's 21st annual Study Day at the Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station was the revelation that plain old Clorox is being used experimentally in spraying of peach trees for brown rot.

Dr. Curtis L. Mason, assistant professor of plant pathology in the College of Agriculture, admitted today that "so far, it is working."

He warned, however, that this limited use cannot be taken as conclusive evidence that Clorox will control brown rot under all conditions. He said several farmers in the Nashville peach area are trying it, and so far are well pleased.

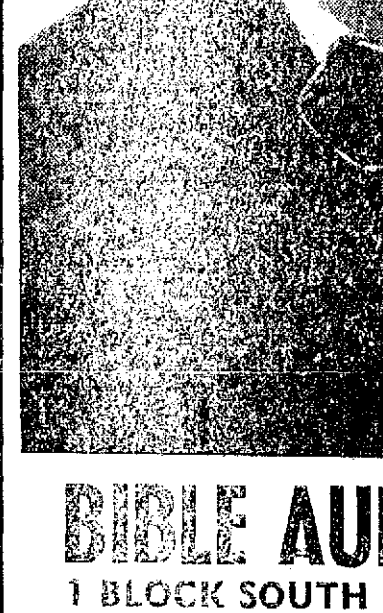

Clorox, chemically is sodium hypochlorite. It is put up commercially under several other brand names, and Dr. Mason said he intends to try all of them. The peach specialist said he got the idea from peach packers, some of whom have been dipping their peaches in Clorox before packing, in order to help protect them during shipment.

Sunday School Lesson

The Book of Psalms: Religion In Poetry.
By William E. Gilroy, D. D.

During the coming weeks many Sunday schools will be studying lessons in the Biblical Book of Psalms. The comment in these columns in directed to many readers not in Sunday Schools but interested in religion and the study of the Bible.

It is my hope that it may be of help to those who teach and learn in Sunday School. But, in view of this wider constituency, it is my aim not to confine the comment to any particular theme, or lesson, but to present backgrounds, highlights, and illuminating details. The object is to increase the intelligent use of the Bible, and bring its guidance and inspiration into immediate influence upon character and daily life. This is particularly necessary in contemplating and studying the Book of the Psalms.

The Book of Psalms must be studied as a whole, if one would grasp their nature and significance in the faith, worship, and life of ancient Israel, and their place and effect in relation to religious life in general.

Only as one reads the Psalms as a whole can one grasp the depth and immensity of their exploitation of every mood and emotion of which the human soul is capable, and their reaction to every experience that mankind has known.

Here are souls in the very heights of exultation and religious ecstasy, dwelling on the mountain, with the clear view of God, and the full inspiration of His presence. But here are souls, also, crying out of the depths of despair, and finding light in the valley of darkness. Here is realism in the face of suffering, and persecution, and the designs and hatred of enemies. And above all realism, in the face of change and decay, and the grimness of death itself.

Here, too, is the voice of friendship and fellowship, the pilgrim songs of those who through life are journeying and worshipping together.

There is nothing left out in the whole range of human emotions, doubts, fears, inspirations and ecstasies — all of life's experiences from the cradle to the grave are there.

From the opening Psalm 1, recounting the blessedness of the man "that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly — but his delight is in the law of the Lord," to the closing 150th Psalm with its typical song of praise the Psalms move in the rich areas of nature and human nature.

Here, in addition to the exploration of the heart of man, and the visions of the glory of God, are the observation and reflections of inspired poets near to every phase of nature, with eyes lifted to the hills, meditations in green pastures and beside still waters, the mystery of the sea, the anger of storms, and towering over man and nature the Holy City and the House of the Lord to which devout souls ascend with gladness, to worship in the sanctuary of strength and beauty, with the word of God hidden in their hearts.

And each of us may have it as his, or her, book of devotions.

CLIPPED ANGEL

Copyright, 1949, NEA SERVICE, INC.

By Clive Grieron Cornish

The Story: Mike McTag, an engineer with definite ideas about women mine operators, has just found reasons why the Dark Angel, Cory Parnell, is not producing high-grade ore. Secretly, with disclosure that there are samplings, one of which was tampered with in the mine. But the question of how 20 tons of high-grade ore are spirited daily from the mine has not been solved. Cory is unwilling to believe that her old employees have been robbing her and refuses to fire anyone. The only other way to solve the mystery, says Mike, is keep silent and find out how the ore is stolen. Mike thinks it has been hauled to some dummy mine and shipped as the production of that mine. He sets out to find the dummy.

I got stuck once and nearly went over a stump with soft shoulders before I had found the first mine.

It was a pick-and-shovel proposition, run by two old boys who should have been drawing down old-age pensions. Instead they were wheeling a barrow back and forth between a tunnel and a crude wooden hopper.

Bits of rock with galena and sphalerite lay around, and that wasn't what I was looking for. I wished them luck and went on my way.

I visited two more places and drew blanks and then a little after 4 o'clock I struck something more promising.

I crossed the P. N. railroads branch line tracks and stopped to look at some loading bunkers on a siding. A broad ramp for trucks ran up behind them, and at the bottom of the bunkers I could see loose ore — high-grade, like the paystreak at Dark Angel. Unfortunately it didn't mean much, because this was copper country, and chalcopyrite and bornite are two of the commonest copper minerals. Still, it was better than galena, which is a lead ore.

I put the car in low and started up the road beyond the track, past a sign that read:

PRIVATE
NO TRESPASSING
ARGUS MINES, INC.

I'd gone about half a mile further when the road leveled off into a muddy clearing with several shacks sitting around the edge. I stopped the car, got out, and started to walk toward the mine dump, a heap of weathered, broken rock on the side of the hill, with an iron loading chute sticking out beyond it over a smooth muddy plain.

I hadn't gone 10 steps before someone shouted at me. I looked over my shoulder and saw a man coming out of one of the shacks. He carried a gun, so I stayed put. "Didn't you see that sign?" he yelled.

I waited until he came a little closer. "Sure, but I'm here on business."

"What'd you want?"

"I'd like to see the owner."

"He's not here."

This fellow's notions of hospitality seemed distinctly limited, so I tossed out a little bait.

"I'm taking a look around this part of the country to see if I can find a likely gamble in a gold prospect."

He eyed Cory's blue convertible behind me. It was a pretty fancy job and even beneath an inch of mud it still looked like money.

"Sorry," he said gruffly, "but we have a valuable property here and we have to be careful about strangers."

"Mind if I take a look around?"

He shook his head. "My orders are not to allow anybody on the place. If you want to see anything you gotta have permission from the owner."

"Okay," I said, "if you'll give me his name and address."

"He moves around quite a bit. I couldn't tell you."

Anybody can look up details of the title to a mining property in the District mining Recorder's office, but I lied that pass.

"You're not operating now, eh?"

"Nope. Closed down a week ago. Now look, I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to check out. This is very valuable property we have here."

I drove away feeling peeved but not altogether surprised.

An armed guard wasn't out of the way. Some of the big outfits take elaborate precautions when they're checking up on a prospect they have under option. They're afraid that if good news got out there'd be a rush to stake half the country around them, for sale later at hold-up prices.

Still, there'd be no harm in finding out who owned the place and I resolved to phone Eddie when I got back to Dark Angel.

I sloshed through more mud and managed to find two more copper prospect holes before it got too dark to see anything.

They'd both been shipping copper ore, about a carload a week, and by the time I headed back for the townsite, my ideas didn't seem so bright. I could visit every outfit in the valley and any one of them might be the fence for Cory's ore, and I wouldn't know it.

The gang wouldn't be trucking ore around the country while I was on the loose. With a strange popping in and out of the work- ings at unexpected times, they wouldn't even dare move it out of the mine. They'd sit tight.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Copyright, 1947
By King Features Syndicate.

New York, June 30 — Judge Samuel H. Kaufman, sitting in the Bronx County Court, has been getting from George Sokolsky and me, I name Mr. Sokolsky first only out of courtesy because I believe his comments on the production and sale of the "Red-baiter" defense have been less opinionated than mine.

I regret this, but first things first, so I regret first the trend and present state of affairs in our federal courts, which have unaccountably brought the honor and respect of our citizens and the judiciary into question with many disreputable and unjustified judgments. I know nothing specifically about Judge Kaufman which I could allege as a contribution to this deplorable state. He is an organization politician, as I observed in an essay which gave him concern, but most of our judges have been such for many years. He acted certain professional indiscretions which hardly could be rehashing and with many of us are minimum requirements. But some citizens would excuse that, although I would take note of it as an important deficiency.

As to his management of the trial I have only a layman's opinion, which may be defective from the standpoint of a lawyer. Laymen, outbursts, lawyers, enormous, and we are entitled to opinions, erroneous as they be. The ladies and gentlemen of the jury are laymen. In many cases, laymen decide life or death cases. So laymen enjoy high standing around here after all.

I have taken a serious interest in the Felix Frankfurter organization, for the unorganized but coherent element, not to say group, in the Roosevelt and Truman administrations of the United States government. I think Frankfurter's influence has been deleterious and his attitude arrogant, impudent and not forthright.

Hiss was a member of this elite or cult which permeated the government in many departments, and which Frankfurter selected Henry L. Stimson to be secretary of war during the great war and Stimson a very old man, was in position to advance to reality plans which Frankfurter desired to put into effect. I suspect that Frankfurter had a strong influence on the decision to concentrate on the rescue of Soviet Russia from Hitler's armies while our people fought one-handed in the Pacific and lost many lives in consequence. It might mean and I suspect it did mean that Frankfurter had a voice in the decision to attack across the channel and let Stalin have his way throughout the Balkans and Poland. This method put Stalin in the Communist position which he now occupies.

These suspicions may be erroneous but they are not unfounded and Frankfurter, by the influence of that I have mentioned, and through very misadventures, has put White House, has himself to blame for their existence. He is the only judge of the Supreme court who ever pulled into so many matters that were not the legitimate business of a man in his job. During the war he even got regularly from the federal communications commission restricted reports which were not available to members of congress representing the people. Frankfurter did not represent the people. They never elected him, even the laymost municipal office in a village. Yet he has had a great influence on the fate of our people and our country and I have a right to oppose that influence and I do.

Alger Hiss is a Frankfurter man. Dean Acheson, our secretary of state, is a Frankfurter man to the same extent that Stimson was. Frankfurter sits on our highest court and when Hiss comes on the stand, elevated, really with treachery to our country, for the present military charges are only a legal pretext, this Supreme court judge steps down and checks the weight of his influence into the defense. It is a synthetic weight I do insist, but our people accept the counterfeit as valid, and Frankfurter is doubtless was counting on that.

It wasn't necessary for this Supreme court judge to butt into this trial as a character witness for a man who is also guilty of the utterly unforgivable crime of adhering to a veritable enemy of our country if he is guilty as charged in this case. In fact, as I will show by analyzing Frankfurter's story and clever double-talk one day soon, he did not say that but that this was a man of good character and loyalty but had made a deceptive bullbustle and seemed to do so. If he wanted to say Hiss was a man of high character and loyalty he could have said it in a few words. I could. Anybody could. Instead this learned man covered up a lot of language and checked the issue. He didn't do that because he planned it that way. Frankfurter and Hiss are a pair. They could have it so, our federal courts have lost much of the respect, according to awe, which they used to command even when they had some pretty cynical, corrupt people on the bench here and there. But the eyes were only here and there. Nowadays there are so many New Deal judges that a citizen who has put his head up in opposition reasonably feels that he can't expect a fair trial.

I think that in this trial not only Hiss but the Frankfurter cult as a political force of great power but without substance, is on trial, too. The Roosevelt administration is on trial, and the Roosevelt myth. President Truman is on trial with respect to his "red-baiter" defense of his administration, including Alger Hiss.

The case called for the most open and honest demonstration of integrity that the department of justice has ever had. It was not even Mr. Thomas Murphy, the prosecuting attorney and a government officer, was able to tell me, when I asked him directly, how it

Better Check All-Star Team for 'Joe'

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer

Better check those all-star votes. The name Joe DiMaggio seems to be missing.

If there is any legitimate 100 percent all-star in the baseball business today, Joe is it. What manager that missed the first game? Off this Sunday, in three ball games, he belongs on the team.

Ask the folks up around Fenway park, where he led the New York Yankees to three straight victories over the Red Sox. He'd be elected by acclamation.

Joe DiMaggio, as manager of the American League team of the July 12 all-star game at Brooklyn, has the privilege of naming the rest of his squad after the eight non-pitching starters have been selected by fan vote. He can use the Yankee clipper, if only as a pinch hitter.

When Lou Pique's squad, really probably fine Jolting Joe right behind the first three outfielders picked by the fans — Ted Williams, Tommy Henrich and brother Dominic DiMaggio.

Since DiMaggio entered the majors in 1936, he has been named to ten all-star teams, missing only 1941-44-45 when he was in service. He didn't play in 1946 although he was on the squad and last year at St. Louis he was injured and appeared only as a pinch-hitter.

Jolting Joe did it again yesterday, crashing a three-run homer in the seventh inning to provide the winning run over the Red Sox.

He proved he is back by hitting into a double play, and popping out as well. Also he walked once and was hit by a pitched ball.

For three days, DiMaggio's performance chart read like this: AB 11, R 5, B 2, O 6, Home runs 4, RBI 9, PO 13, A 0, 2 e.

His first hit was a single, but the last four have been homers to the Johnny Mize of the New York Giants for the most homers by an active player. Each was hit 307.

The Sox are now in fifth place, eight 1/2 games back.

Vic Raschi, who has been in a route-going job for his 12th season, hit a home run in the seventh inning to give the Sox a 2-1 victory.

Washington gave the Yankees a little more breathing room by knocking off Philadelphia, 5-3, in the only night game. The Sox won the second game, A's 5-1-2 games behind New York.

A four-run rally in the eighth after two were out helped Dick Weik win his first major league game as a reliever for Joe DiMaggio.

St. Louis won the night game, 2-1, over the Braves, and the Braves won the day game, 3-2, over the Cardinals.

Brooklyn and St. Louis both lost in the National League. The Braves won the first game, 3-2, and the Cardinals won the second, 3-1.

Bill Voiselle and Gene Elliott, who were traded to the Boston Braves, won a 6-2 victory over the Cardinals.

APPLICATION FOR PERMIT

TO: THE CITY MEAT & MILK INSPECTOR
THE MAYOR, AND MEMBERS OF THE CITY COUNCIL
CITY OF HOPE, ARKANSAS

June 30, 1949

Gentlemen:

Please consider this as an application for the necessary permit to sell Grade "A" pasteurized and homogenized milk within the police jurisdiction of the City of Hope, Arkansas.

If granted a permit, I propose to obtain my milk from the Borden Company's nearest pasteurization plant. While I have no official connection with the Borden Company, such company has agreed to furnish me with all the Grade "A" milk I may need to serve my customers in Hope at all times. I also understand that the Borden Company has expressed a desire to purchase from Hempstead County producers of raw milk all such milk which may be offered to them for sale and which meets the health requirements of the City of Hope and of the State Board of Health. In addition, I am also advised that the Borden Company plans to develop new producers in this area.

The milk which I propose to sell in Hope will be transported in proper equipment, trucks, etc., and will be delivered in a sanitary and cool condition for sale here strictly in accordance with the ordinances of the municipality and the health regulations of the City of Hope and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the State Department of Health.

I do not intend to deliver milk at retail to the homes of the city but have in mind selling only to grocery stores and other retail out-lets.

I am willing and able to comply with all the health requirements of the City of Hope, and the Borden Company invites any inspection which may be required or desired of its plant, equipment, or milk shed.

I am a veteran of World War II and, as an individual, am attempting to establish a new business in your city. I have faith in the future of Hope and Hempstead County and am willing to invest my money here and become a part of this community if permitted to do so.

If any other papers or applications or documents are needed in order for this request to receive your consideration, please advise me of that fact. Thanking you in advance for your careful consideration of this application, I am

Respectfully,

William (Bill) McClendon
P. O. Box 83, Hope, Arkansas

ENDORSEMENT

The undersigned as Manager of the Texarkana Branch of The Borden Company, by this endorsement hereby verifies the matters and facts set forth in the above and foregoing application filed by Mr. William (Bill) McClendon with reference to this company's agreement to furnish him all the Grade "A" milk he may need to serve his customers in Hope, and our willingness to purchase raw milk from the Hempstead County producers, as set out in the application, and of our intentions to develop new producers in Hempstead County as he has stated.

We invite any inspection which may be required or desired of our plant, equipment or milk shed. Any of our milk that may be sold in Hope by Mr. McClendon or any one else will more than meet the health requirements of the City and State.

ANOTHER BERAN—Czech church sources reported that Archbishop Josef Matocha, above, of Olomouc, Czechoslovakia's second-ranking Catholic, has received the same treatment given to Archbishop Josef Beran of Prague. Archbishop Matocha's office has been put under police control. Two of his staff members have been arrested and police have made a two-day search of his residence.

Bill McClendon Seeks Milk Permit Here

William (Bill) McClendon, a member of the Hope American Legion baseball team, today filed an application with city authorities seeking a permit to sell Grade "A" pasteurized and homogenized milk in Hope.

The full text of the application is published elsewhere in this issue of the Star as an advertisement. "I have faith in the future of Hope and Hempstead county and am willing to invest my money here and become a part of this community if permitted to do so," Mr. McClendon said. "It is for that reason that I am not only filing my application with the proper city authorities but, in order that the public generally may know what I propose to do, I am also having a copy of such application published in the press," he added.

The application itself was addressed to the City Milk Inspector, the Mayor, and members of the City Council and set out that Mr. McClendon proposed to handle Borden milk and, if granted a permit, would distribute his products through local grocery stores.

The new application is the latest of several which have been filed in recent years by individuals seeking to distribute Borden's milk products in Hope. The city ordinance provides that no pasteurized milk or milk products not pasteurized in Hempstead County may be sold within the police jurisdiction of the City of Hope unless authorized by the city authorities.

The officials of the Borden Company said today that Mr. McClendon has no official connection with that company but that they have agreed to furnish him all the milk he may need to serve his customers in Hope at all times. In addition, the Borden Company officials say they are anxious to buy from Hempstead County producers of raw milk all such milk which may be offered to them for sale and which meets the health requirements of the City of Hope and the Arkansas Board of Health.

"We are not trying to put any local plant out of business or to take producers away. On the contrary, the Borden Company desires to further the dairy industry in Hempstead County by developing new producers in this area and afford two, instead of one, market for the farmers and dairymen. We pay out over a million dollars a year in the Texarkana area for milk and desire to spend some of that money in Hempstead County," S. M. Hargrove, manager of the Texarkana branch of the Borden Company stated today. "Our only connection with the application which Mr. McClendon has filed is to assist him, as an individual, to start a new business. If our pasteurized milk is sold in Hempstead County by Mr. McClendon, or anyone else, Borden will certainly purchase it's part of the raw milk production of the area," Mr. Hargrove added.

Camp Pioneer, the summer council camp for the Caddo Area council, has had good attendance during the past three periods according to scout office. More than 270 scouts from all nine of the districts in the council have enjoyed the activities which Camp Pioneer affords.

Scouts from Hope and Hempstead district are planning on attending one of three remaining periods. The other periods are June 26 to July 3; July 10 to July 17 and July 24 to July 31.

A business session and convocation for their Order of the Arrow honor campers society of which there are several members in the Hempstead district will be held on July 24 and 25 according to Oscar Cantwell scout executive.

Scouts wishing to attend camp on either of the remaining sessions should contact their scoutmaster at once.

Agreement Reached

Little Rock, June 29 —(P)—The state education department and the veterans administration have reached an agreement on a farm training program for the fiscal year starting July 1.

A contract signed yesterday provides a $20 per month payment to veteran-students. Total cost of the VA was estimated about $4,600,000.

The farm training program is administered by the vocational education division of the education department.

Anything Which Is Close to the Heart of Canada Is Also Close to the Heart of America

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
This is Canada's big day — anniversary of her advent as a nation 82 years ago. Happy birthday, neighbor.

Anything which is close to the heart of Canada is close to the heart of America. Thus it is with affectionate regards that we extend our greetings across a boundary which, after all, is only an imaginary line so far as fraternal feelings are concerned. It pleases us mightily that to all intents we two nations are as one, although each is jealous of its sovereignty.

The pride in sovereignty, by the way, is something to be remembered by well-meaning but foolish folk who babble about the two nations joining under one flag. That just isn't in the cards, and it isn't necessary to unity of purpose or the friendship which we cherish.

Our big neighbor (bigger than we are territorially) has every right to be proud on this "independence day." Eighty-two years is a very brief period for a nation to accomplish what Canada has. As this column recently pointed out, Canada has played a leading role in the evolution of the British commonwealth into an association of wholly independent nations.

The Canadians always have stood solidly for their rights. I'm reminded of World War One, when I saw much of the dominion troops in France. The Canadians took no nonsense from anybody. To emphasize this, when a body of their soldiers took up a new position in the line their first business ordinarily was to take off their tunics and engage the English on either side in a battle of fists. Once that was settled the Canadians donned their tunics and turned attention to the Germans.

That same spirit impelled the Canadian government to fight a great battle for separate representation in the League of Nations — a battle which she won. Finally in 1931 the historic Statute of Westminster was born in London, providing that the "dominions are autonomous communities."

Thus, while none of the commonwealth nations is more proud of its old world heritage than in Canada, who has developed a personality of her own in the new world. If your columnist seems to speak with considerable assurance about the Canadian people, it is perhaps with justification. Among the fondest memories of my boyhood are the many days spent on the old homestead which my Scotch great-grandfather hewed out of the new Brunswick forest back in the eighteenth century.

His community became the seat of a "sect" of God-fearing, hard working Presbyterians. Those were the days when the pastor of the Old Kirk used to preach sermons three hours long, and had a glass of Scotch whiskey on the pulpit to help him along when half way through.

His religious fervor descended; for my grandfather used to gather the family about him every night and, after reading aloud from the Bible, got us all down on our knees while he prayed for half an hour. And a small in-laws to fall asleep, and when granddaddy got through with his detailed advice to Heaven he would shake his head at me reprovingly, though often there was a twinkle in his eye.

Since those days I have toured Canada and talked with folks in all parts of the country. One cannot fail to come away with the impression of an upright, sturdy, progressive, kindly people. There is a friendship worth cultivating and cherishing.

It is good to know that Canada and America, by agreement of our governments, stand together in defense of the Western hemisphere. So again, felicitations on this great day for Canada.

Stock Market Feebly Picking Up Pieces

New York, July 1 — (P)—The stock market woke up from a winter sleep in the first half of 1949 — and promptly tumbled to a 4 1/2-year low.

At the half-way mark, the market now is feebly picking up the pieces and trying to climb out of the low hit on June 13. There is little or no public support behind the recovery attempt, though, and its future is doubtful.

Since the turn of the year the national economy generally has been going through what may be out to be the most painful period of the postwar readjustment.

Some of the wrenches were violent, some accomplished with comparative ease. Prices declined, personal income contracted, the unemployment figures steadily increased, production in virtually every industry was cut back. Caution—which is only a step removed from fear—dominated the thinking of countless business executives.

In mid-May, prices started to slide. Business news offered little to stimulate demand for stocks. Steel production declined week after week, unemployment hit a post-war high, the annual period of negotiations between labor and management drew near, corporate dividends were reduced or omitted.

On June 13 the downward rush reached a climax. Prices plunged to the lowest level, according to the Associated Press, average of 60 stocks, since January, 1945. And, even worse, the average broke through a famous triple low, one first established in 1946, again in 1947, and still again in 1948.

In the one-month period the market value of all stocks listed on the New York Exchange was reduced by around $6,000,000,000.

During the period since June 13 the market has wearily tried to come back—and, despite a severe contraction in trading interest, has managed to recoup about one-third of its losses.

The AP 60-stock average closed 1948 at 64.5, on June 30, at 59.9. In between the average cracked to a low of 53, reached a high of 66.2.

Today's opinion in the financial district is clearly divided over prospects for the second half of the year. One side feels that a summer rally is at least a possibility. The other side claims that the market will drop through the June 13 low.
